GRANT.

The office and barroom of the Metropolitan Hotel were crowded yesterday by expectant placemen in speculative surmises of General Grant's de signs, movements and intentions. The representatives of the press, who mostly hailed from the Hub and Western towns, were positively anxious to discover the intentions of the General with respect to the Evarts dinner, and a number of good cocktalls were sacrificed in the excitement of hour. The announcement in the HERALD that General Grant was averse to meeting either McCullough, Welles or Randall appeared to knock these gentlemen completely out of time. Advo cates of special interests, of this, that and the other ring which the slighted were as much puzzied as annoved, and were unable to find words of sufficient weight to engress the propore might be said, and that the poils of the advendatzian for the next four years would be dislated from the Tricums office. The feneral, however, seemed not to heed the conquiators and the carious, who gazed at him with open houths, but looked like any other gentlenan, with a root appedite, bound to push bings at the breakast table. The Thames Championship Boat Race-Randforth the Winner. LONDON, Nov. 17, 1888,

The Kelley and Randforth boat race for the cham plonship of the river Thames took place to-day. The astch (for £200 a side, in gold) was made September 12, the men to row up the river above the bridge from Putney to Mortiake, about five miles, and to start from two boats moored twenty yards apart, the steamers to be behind the men at starting and the cutters accompanying the men to remain stern of the sternmost man throughout the race. Henry Kelley has long been the champion of the river Thames, and also a general favorite in aquation circles. His antagonist, James Randforth, of Gates-head, Newcastie-upon-Tyne, has in like manner been the favorite of the Tynesiders, and has the advantage of youth on his side over the older champion. There was an immense gathering along the river banks, and every available point was well occupied. Numerous steamers and other craft covered the river. and the excitement was intense. After an excling struggle the race was won by Randforth.

Message of Governor Holden-Condition State Finances-Internal Improvements-Immigration Needed-Free Schools Re quired.

RALEIGH, Nov. 17, 1868. There was a quorum is both Houses of the Legis lature to-day. Governor Holden's message wa read. After congratulating the body upon the pros perous season, the recovery of the State from finan-cial depression, the re-establishment of railroad lines and the projecting of new lines of communication, the fluances. On the 1st October, 1858, the deb was $19,208,245, inclusive of bonds issued for internal improvements, amounting to nearly $34,000,000. The amount of interest maturing upon said data was $112,103, which has been paid in cash. The interest maturing upon subsequent dates during the present fiscal year, ending September 30, $1,022,504. Expenses of State government during the present fiscal year are esupon subsequent dates during the present fiscal year, ending September 39, $1,022,590. Expenses of State government during the present fiscal year are estimated at $275,230, which, added to interest failing due, will leave $1,407,826 to be provided for. To meet this the trensurer will have $25,004 $4 on hand, leaving the remainder to be raised by taxation. Stocks and bonds held by the State amount to $13,241,109. He recommends that measures be taken to insure the payment of the interest due the State from these scocks and bonds. The value of property in the State is estimated at $250,00,000, upon which an accordant ax of one per cent would raise $2,500,000. This, he auggests, alone would pay the interest, which should be met promptly.

Internal improvements are strongly alvocated and the completion of the Winnington, Charlotte and Rutherfora road, the Fayetteville and, Western North Carolina road, to which State and das been given, are advised as early as possible.

Immigration should be encourared upon a liberal scale as the chief means by which the resources of the State can be developed. The importance of a system of common schools and education of the masses is then areas at length, and the Governor debouches into an elaborate argument upon the protection of labor with a due regard to the ragics of the capitalists. The abolition of the present stay laws is recommended as enjost to the creditor, even assuming that the unfortunes condition of the State would not make it has he to the detator to compel him to meet his objections. An immediate organization of the militia, based upon an expression of washington, that a free people ought not only to be armed, but disciplined, is stremmonly urged.

only to be arried, but distributed, is streamble, y ingred.

After recommensing economy in public expenditures, calling attention to the duties and salaries of public onlicers and the prosperous condition of the various public institutions of the State, he congratulates the Assembly upon the suppression of the reaching, the reconstruction of the Union upon the basis of suffrage for all, and the election of Grant and Collax to the offices of President and Vice President of the Union States, all of which combine to render the Union indissoluble and perpetual. He concludes as follows:—

to render the Union indissoluble and perpetual. He concludes as follows:—
This government is in the hands of its friends and will be administered by them. The government of North Carolina is in the hands of its friends and of the friends of the national government, and will be administered by them. It should not be our aim to use it for prosperity of oppression to any, but for the protection and benefit of all. Its very suffety, without reference to the importance of maintaining and carrying out in good faith the great principles on which it is founded, absolutely requires that its friends should continue to administer its affairs. In no other way can harmony be maintained in those relations between the maintained in those relations between the maintained in those relations between the maintain and state governments, sandered for a time by rebealion, but now happing restored.

WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Nev. 17, 1868. General Grant Captured by a Politician. As an instance of the popular admiration for the President elect 1 may mention an incident that occurred at the depot the night General Grant left ere for New York. The General had succeeded in teeping the time of his intended departure a close secret, and consequently but few persons knew that he had started for the depot. He was accompanied by his family, General Deut and General Comstock. The latter, however, did not go with him to New platform, which was not until the train had begun to move, he was suddenly recog-nized by a man who had been circulating through the crowd and who had the appearance of a hard up politician in search of rem past sacrifices in the shape of an office. As soon as he beheld Grant he rushed forward, exclaiming, "I really do b'fieve this is General Grant! I must shake hands with ye, General " Thereupon he seized the General by both hands and continued to shake while the train was in motion, walking beside the platover this vigorous demonstration of affection and tried to escape, but the politician chap, who knew the old proverb about the value of a bird in the hand, held on manfully until the General was nearly dragged off the platform. At this juncture General Comstock rushed forward General entered the car, to the great relief of his family, who were in dread lest he should be dragged beneath the wheels and killed, leaving the affectionate politician on the depot platform, apologizing to General Comstock.

T. Bennett, for the district comprising North and South Carolina. By the arrival of the time to close business for the day the Secretary bad about made up his mind to reject the original nominees for the district of Louisiana and the district of Himors, and to confirm as Supervisors for these districts Mr. Joseph R. West for the former and Mr. John Olney for the latter. These two last confirmations, however, are still regarded in the department as profound secrets, the official aunouncement of their appointment not having been made because the commissions have not been forwarded, and because, too, there is yet upon the men to fill these highly important office coms to be a very trying one, as but one applicant are about a dozen, more or less, all unexceptionably recommended. The great object to be subserved in making these selections is to secure men of un-doubted honesty, integrity and ability. The Secretary finds that among the armful of applications on the there are none who do not fill the required conditions to a charm, hence the great diffculty in making selections. With regard to many of the applicants for Supervisorships one peculiarity is remarkably plain: they manifest their deep interest in the welfare of the government by abandoning offices or business pursuits that girld a much larger pecuniary recompense than that honestly attaching the office of Supervisor, This self-sacrificing spirit is probably regarded as an evidence of their desire to see an honest Supervisor of the collector of the revenue tax. The whole number of apervisors new appointed is fifteen, leaving ten vacancies yet to be filled. It is believed, th tinal all these officials will have been appointed be TREASURY. Duties on Wrecked Goods-Allowances for Damages-Seizure of Distilled Spirits-Un-dervaluation of Goods.

The Treasury Department has published a synopis of the decisions by the Secretary. In cases of wrecked goods it is proper for collectors to allow entry thereof by appraisement; and when goods are sub ject to specific duties the percentage of damages should be deducted from the quantity and the regu-far duty assessed on the quantity thus reduced. The regulation of the department probibling col lectors of customs granting allowances for damage beyond fifty per cent (except upon the approval of the department in each case), applies to goods damaged in an ordinary manner on a voyage of importation, and is not held to govern in cases of wrocked goods. Enges and flatboats, temporarily wheeled goods. Barges and flatboats, temporarily using sails as means to proper them, are not exempt from the payment of the tonnage tax, under the little provision, section 10s, act of July 15, 1868. All applications for relief upon Custom House bonds should be presented to the collector by one of the obligious for transmission to the Treasury Department, and the collector by one of the obligious for transmission to the Treasury Department, and the collector is authorized under general instructions to hold the bonds referred to in said application and advised of the excision of the department. The application should indicate cleakly that diligence has been used in endayoung to obtain the inconstant certificate. It should also be presented before the bond matured, or reasons given for the omission. The practice of sending rendy-simile
